Partners such as the Japanese Football Association, the Italian Football Association and Mexico's Liga MX have already experimented with motion capture technology to re-create match situations in-game for a controlled, repeatable environment. With this addition, FIFA 22 now offers realistic game conditions that will allow players to improve their soccer skills. Players will be able to create a team configuration with any number of kits and any number of formations and styles. This is the first time players will have the ability to create their own team - and feature their own unique kits and experiences. Players will be able to perform different skills more accurately and naturally, making matches more realistic. Players can take advantage of the new techniques in several different ways. For starters, players will be able to create their own custom set-ups and style of play. This includes the number of players on the pitch, the formation, the number of substitutes, etc. They can also be unlocked as they are earned, allowing players to truly customize their game.
