I am glad that DAA as a whole will do anything to prevent this country from going bankrupt. Hopefully, when gas prices go up, airlines will be more selective about where they fly. If a half full plane is filling up, it must cost far less for the airline to fly. It would not be the first time that an airline will not care about the price of fuel at all. While I was on vacation last month, I tried to book a flight from Houston. The last flight I could book was on June 15th for $7.00. I then tried booking an earlier flight and was able to book it for $15.00. Needless to say, if I had not been close to getting to Seattle, I would have still paid the $15.00. I am still thankful for our roads that provide me with access to the USA and wish that in time, we will have another highway in the western states. It is great that the oil companies are making more profits. However, I am also glad that Texas, and DAA as a whole are making more money with the oil extracted. I am certainly not complaining about this, but I certainly am not happy about the fact that we are making more money from the oil companies, but we are paying higher gas prices. The last time I checked I was paying less than $5.00/gallon for gas. I am only paying $3.78. At least here in Houston, gas prices are down 50 cents in the last 24 hours. I am only paying $3.78, but that still makes my gas cost right around $4
