every relevant topic with a date and time on when it happened. in december of 2013 i came into the end of a 6 month contract with verizon. i asked for a rate reduction on my $110/month unlimited data plan, but was told i would not be eligible for a rate reduction because i was "grandfathered" into the original rate. after a brief discussion with verizon i started looking around and found a company called, "nationwide." i gave them a call and accepted a 7 month contract for $80/month unlimited data with a $100 credit for upgrading to the $120 plan. i signed up for this right away and was promptly contacted by a rep to finalize my activation in 14 days. i had just purchased a new computer and was turning it on on a day i had planned to be activated. i was called at 12:41pm to a computer rep and informed that i had activated through the wrong department, and that my activation was scheduled for the next day. as i began my discussion with the rep he informed me that i had taken advantage of a loophole and that i would receive a bill in the mail for the full price of my new plan. i was immediately put on hold to allow my phone call to drop to a local support. this dropped the rep on the phone to the local level, and asked why i had not recieved the email with my contract details. this dropped me out to a local support. the first rep i talked to told me i was calling with the wrong company name and that the rep at my location would have me call again. this dropped me out to a third party app support who informed me that i had indeed purchased a new contract, but that they had no record of me receiving any contract or details. needless to say i decided not to call back to the local

location again because they were unable to help me.
