Simnet Startup Manager Freeware download link:Elimination of erythrocyte-bound uroporphyrinogen I and coproporphyrin I in porphyria cutanea tarda. To investigate the mechanism of removal of coproporphyrin I and uroporphyrinogen I from erythrocytes in porphyria cutanea tarda, the concentrations of the porphyrins and their precursors in blood from four patients with the disease and from normal individuals were determined. The patients showed increased concentrations of erythrocyte uroporphyrinogen I and coproporphyrin I, with normal concentrations of uroporphyrinogen II and coproporphyrinogen I. Upon removal of the porphyrins from whole blood, the time-course of appearance in plasma was followed for 4 h. Erythrocyte-bound uroporphyrinogen I and coproporphyrin I disappeared from the erythrocytes at a similar rate, and both were detected in plasma from all patients as soon as 4 h after blood withdrawal. The free uroporphyrinogen I and coproporphyrin I concentrations in plasma remained low and constant from 0 to 4 h. In normal individuals, the erythrocyte-bound uroporphyrinogen I and coproporphyrin I concentrations in whole blood fell by 85-96% in 4 h. These data indicate that erythrocyte-bound uroporphyrinogen I and coproporphyrin I are eliminated by a single pathway and are transported across the erythrocyte membrane. The data also suggest that in the erythrocytes of patients with porphyria cutanea tarda the synthesis of erythrocyte-bound uroporphyrinogen I and coproporphyrin I, but not the activity of uroporphyrinogen decarboxylase, is normal.Cambuslang and Paisley join forces to help and support those affected by drug and alcohol misuse.
