The expression of major histocompatibility complex (MHC) class II antigens by monocytes is regulated by cytokines, especially by interferon gamma (IFN-gamma). The c-Jun N-terminal kinase (JNK) is a mitogen-activated protein (MAP) kinase, which is activated by several agents, including IFN-gamma. In this study we investigated whether JNK is involved in the expression of HLA-DR antigens in human monocytes stimulated with Mycobacterium leprae sonicate. Human monocytes were cultured in the presence or absence of recombinant human IL-4 or IFN-gamma, in the absence or presence of the JNK inhibitor, SP600125, and in the presence or absence of M. leprae sonicate. Monocytes were characterized by flow cytometry for CD14 and CD16. HLA-DR expression was measured using anti-HLA-DR-FITC staining and flow cytometry. HLA-DR expression was significantly decreased in monocytes cultured with M. leprae sonicate, compared with controls. SP600125 alone was able to increase the expression of HLA-DR. Addition of SP600125 to M. leprae sonicate resulted in further reduction of HLA-DR expression compared with M. leprae sonicate alone. Furthermore, the combination of SP600125
