Instantly make backup copies of all Windows registry entries before you delete them.Q: How do I get a list of all added to -applications-documentation/ How do I get a list of all added to /usr/share/applications/ with the command grep, just like man -k? I can't see any way of doing this with the man pages as man returns the full documentation, and I'm not interested in that. A: Try find /usr/share/applications -type f -exec grep --with-filename -r '.*' {} \; That will list all the files in the directory. A: You can try xargs -a /usr/share/applications -L 1 -- /usr/bin/grep -e Edit: This should also work: find /usr/share/applications -type f -exec /usr/bin/grep -e {} \; (grep -e runs grep and passes in the filename.) A more robust solution would be to look for a file that you know is in there

Create macros to automate frequently-used registry operations. To create a new macro, launch the Macro Wizard by choosing the Tools | Macro Wizard menu. Then, fill out the form as desired and save the macro as a.reg file to a directory of your choice.... Registry-cleaner Full Version is an efficient solution to clean your entire Windows Registry. The program lets you clean all kinds of data and invalid or obsolete information, cleaning the Windows Registry, the Application Data Path, the Internet Cache and cookies, recycle GAR, recover Mozilla Firefox addons, remove invalid and corrupted entries, remove duplicates, remove orphaned files and folders.... No one likes the time it takes to create a duplicate of a file and then copy it to another place. Unless you use a third party copy utility, then you'd have to go through a lengthy procedure that involves copying the file to a network location, or copy and paste through the Windows Start Menu. There's a better way. You can use your mouse and keyboard for much faster and more efficient ways to duplicate a file. Yes, you read that right. I'm talking about Keyboard Macro tools. You're on the road, and you need to update your e-mail, your contact list, or other important documents on your PDA. You could turn on your computer and enter the information in your usual way. Keyboard macros will make the entire process much faster and easier. A typical keyboard macro could look like this: Press F9. Press Ctrl + L. Press F2. Press Tab. Press Return. Press F9. Press Tab. Press Tab. Press Return. Press F4. Press Ctrl + L. Press Tab. Press Return. Press F4. This macro automatically copies a large amount of information to your PDA. The program saves you a lot of time, and you are no longer tied to a keyboard that has to be within reach. Most keyboard macros will let you assign a keystroke to start the macro, and another keystroke to end the macro. You will be able to define as many macro commands as you want, and assign each command to its own key. Most keyboard macros are simple: they use a single keystroke to start, and another keystroke to finish. The long awaited upgrade to the RegCleaner is here. Version 3.1 of RegCleaner has been released to include the new 2edc1e01e8
