In the case above, I was selecting the file and generating a preview on a separate window. The preview window showed the pixel graphics I had on the PDF when I closed the PDF window. If I had exported the file as a JPEG, when I opened the PDF file it wouldn't show me what was in the PSD file. I had to export the file as a TIFF and try again. I like the Smart Previews and would encourage users to experiment with them. I've found with most images, the smart previews alternatives are very useful although they do add to the file size.
